- 1) There are 13 Bro Montanians that make up our Fantasy Football League. We can confidently say that all 13 of us are different and unique from each other. Our group contains a school administrator, small business owners, engineers, salesmen, golf pros, and everything in between. However, the one thing that we all have in common is our desire to be great: in life, or fantasy football. There are no ‘Average Joes’ in this league. This doesn’t come by accident; it is through hard work and the determination inside every one of us to succeed in any of our aspirations.

In your own words, please tell us what makes you unique. What do you want to do after high school? Why is that so important to you?

- 2) Fantasy Football can be a casual, fun game or it can be an incredibly in-depth, statistic-filled, podcast-crazed mountain of research that builds your full portfolio of knowledge to best use before the draft, during the draft, and every day through the entire season. Please describe in any length and in comparative fantasy football terms what you’ve done to best prepare yourself for college and life outside of high school.

- 3) What do you think will be the impact on Derrick Henry's fantasy value by going to the Ravens this off-season?
- 4) The difference between winning and losing a season often comes from identifying the players with the greatest potential. Though some players are the clear #1 candidates at their position, many players who are often overlooked (looking at you Puka Nacua) will inevitably rise through the ranks to help win a championship for many fantasy teams. Please describe a situation in your life in which you faced great adversity, what led you to rise above and persevere, and what you learned that will help you throughout the rest of your life.
- 5) Who do you think was the biggest fantasy "bust" this past football season and why?
- 6) Fantasy Football requires a lot of preparation if you want any opportunity to win a title, however, some things seem to be out of the hands of fantasy football team executives. Ultimately, there is an element of luck that goes along with attaining that elusive championship season. What was your luckiest moment ever?
- 7) It's considered a fantasy football sin to manifest the name of your team the night of your league's draft. A name should be conceived months in advance, it should be thought out, planned, and carefully curated, if for no other reason, than to avoid humiliation in front of your peers. What we're about to ask, we would not suggest trying at your next fantasy football draft. Hypothetically, tonight is draft night. What is the name of your team this year, and why?
- 8) What do you consider your greatest strength that you can utilize to immediately benefit your community, or the people closest to you?
