Re: CompTIA's TestOut Courses and CertMaster Platform

To Whom it May Concern,

The Computing Technology Industry Association, Inc., known as CompTIA, is a trade association representing and advancing the global information technology industry and its workforce. CompTIA is a global leader in vendor-neutral technical education and certifications in skills ranging from IT support and networking to cybersecurity and cloud computing. More than 3 million CompTIA certifications have been awarded to technology professionals in over 230 countries around the world.

As of the date above, CompTIA affirms that:

1. CompTIA is the owner and sole provider of all TestOut Courses, including but not limited to training videos, demonstrations, lab exercises, written lessons, and exam questions in the courses.
2. CompTIA is the owner and sole provider of the platform, CertMaster (formerly known as LabSim), through which the courses are delivered.
3. No other company or firm in the United States sells or distributes TestOut courses or the CertMaster platform which delivers TestOut courses.
4. Competition is precluded because CompTIA owns all the copyright, patent, and/or common law intellectual property rights associated with the CertMaster platform and the courses therein.

Specific questions or concerns may be directed to legal@comptia.org
