

A Bird's-Eye View: Columbia Junior Earns Pilot's License, Shares Unique School Photos

Talk about an inspiring achievement! Columbia High School junior Tucker Scheithauer officially earned his private pilot's license this spring, a testament to his incredible dedication and hard work. This accomplishment isn't just a personal victory; it opens up a whole new world of exciting possibilities.

To mark this special occasion, Tucker took to the skies with his mom, Jen, and treated us to some stunning aerial photographs of Columbia High School. These aren't just any photos – they offer a rare and captivating perspective of our campus, highlighting its beauty and unique setting from a truly bird's-eye view.

